FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, A VISION.

gh 'twas midnight's solemn hour, Although 'twas midnight's solemn hour, When ghosts and fairies have the power To roam in air, on hand, or sea, And sing and dance in ghostly glee; I thought I saw a spirit bright, Her eye beam'd forth a dazzling light, Bat in that eye a tear was seen. And haggard was the spirit's mien; Twas like the look which Nature wears then summer clouds Jasobye in tears. Twas like the none control water wears when summer clouds. Essolve in tears, and when those tears, in smiling apray. Commingle with the sun's bright ray, I griev'd to think that sorrow e'er should dwell within a soul so fair; Should dwell within a soul so har; Asd thought that I with awe drew nigh, And question'd why she heav'd the sigh, Why sorrow could disturb a breast, Which ne'er with woe should be opprest.

"Aha!" said she, "my hopes are gone,
And every beam of joy is flown,
My hour is past, my splendour lost,

Since poesy at my feet did lay

Cast round the Olio sweet perfume;
But all the flowers which gentus braided
And fancy bound, are dim and faded;
"Pasquin," once bright, has sunk to rhym
No more to heaven his verses offind—
"Ariel" is silent, "B" has fled,
And "Constance," lovely maid, is dead;
The bard of sweetest minstrelsy,
Why is he ailent, gifted "B,"?
Has sorrow snapt his tuneful lyre,
And quench'd his muse's hallow'd fire?
Or why is "Ariel" hush'd' alt, once
His pen was fear'd by every dunce,
But now stupidity may claim
The poet's pure and sacred fame!
"Pasquin!" I thought a southern sun
Would ripen what was left undone,
Would make thy muse to heaven aspire,
And leave behind all grosser fre."

the paus'd-and round did wildly look : To ease her sorrow thus I spok "Sweet spirit cease to be so sad, Once more the Olio shall be glad; Thy truant Bards will, like the dove, Return with olive branch of love, And in the Post's gay column's meet, And scatter flowers fresh and sweet ymond's" soft tale once more shall shine,
"Laura's" sentimental line; "B's" martial song and tender lay, As crst, shall make its pages gay; "Ariel's" pen may not speak in vain, And "Pasquin" be himself again!

The Genius, in mild majesty,
Bent 'neath its fringe her eye on me,
And smiling like that ged alove,
Which "poet's sing to when they love,"
Said, "Stranger, thanks, no more I'll grieve, But thy bright prophecies believe."

She vanish'd like the morning mist, When it the orient beam has kiss'd; The smile she gave my slumbers broke, Was but the " fabric of a vision.

ON THE DEATH OF A SISTER. And art thou gone—forever gone— To smile on us—to charm no more; $0 soon—and pass'd that lonely bourne, From whence no traveller can return, And hail'd the vast eternal shore

Ah me-so sudden was the blow, so hastily thy spirit fled, scarcely could believe it so, I searcely could believe it so, Even when I seen them lay thee low, in the cold grave, amongst the dead. Although, upon thy lifeless form

I gaz'd, and touch'd thy brow so cold, And agoniz'd, to think the worm Would soon thy loveliness deform, And the cold grave thy limbs enfold-

But since that wildering hour of pain My soul has deeply learned to feel, In the drear void that does remain, A loss it ever must sustain, A wound no time can ever heal.

No. 300. Comite face of the control of the control

For there was much -oh, much to bind, In strongest ties, my soul to thee, For all the beauties of thy mind I'd felt—and knew thee good and kind, From cold and selfish feelings free.

And oh, thy love was so sincere, So mild thy accents, sweet thy smile: But ah, 'tis past - and I shall hear That voice no more—that smile so dear will never more my griefs beguile.

For here thou canst not be again, These eyes will ne'er behold thee more; In the cold grave, that drear domain, Thy youthful lovely form is lain,

With clods and darkness cover'd o'er

But not thy spirit-that has fied Beyond these seenes of gloom and grief:
And when around thy lowly bed
Our tears of sad regret are shed,
Oh this alone can give relief:

That there's a world all bright and fair, Mhere blest and happy spirits go, Where blest and happy spirits go, Andwe may hope to meet thee there, Releas'd from pain, and grief and care, Forever free'd from every woe.

pacity of receiving all kinds, and of bringing them to any state of perfection; for if he were born in the knowledge of science, he would not be capable of receiving any other, than those originally implanted, and consequently would be as unfit for improvement in science and wisdom, as the beauts which surround him. "Man at his birth, may be compared with ground, in which no seed has been sown, but still is properly prepared for the receiving of any kind, whereas, beauts me like ground already sown, and covered with grass, and other herbs, which receives no other seed than what has been sown in it already, or if it receives any other, it chokes it in the birth, and cannot bring it to maturity." The progress of man is like the industrious hursbandman who is ever seeking something new to increase the use, beauty and profit of his farm; whilst that of beasts is like him who makes no exertion to improve and cultivate the earth but is satisfied with whatever it spontaneously produces.

As science and affection, therefore vate the earth but is satisfied with whatever it spontaneously produces.

As acience and affection, therefore, are not innate principles, and as man can derive nothing from himself, but is altogether dependent upon others, for every idea necessary to the formation and improvement of his mental character, the duties of parents and teachers, become, indeed, highly responsible, for the feelings which are impressed upon the heart, and the ideas infused into the understandings of children, by their instructors, form the ground work, of the future man; indeed, the happiness or misery, of a future state of existence, may depend, in a great measure, upon the instruction which the infinitile mind receives:—"

Just as the twig is bent the tree's in--" Just as the twig is bent the tree's in-

But the more important period of life, is, when man arrives at the age of maturity, and begins to think and act for himself; for in this state, ite not only judges of principles presented to his notice, but also confirms or rejects those which were re-ceived during his infancy and childhood, and thereby torms within himself, that character in which he will appear in the other life. Man loses nothing by death, but his corporeal covering of flesh and hones all the affections and principles of his mind remain entirely the same, as when in the natural world, and therefore, being judged according to the deeds done in the body, is happy or miserable, according to the nature of the affections or loves, which he has confirmed within him. tions or loves, which he has confirmed within him. All deeds or actions originate in the affections of the will. Those, therefore, who have been Ising in the love and indulgence of evil, through the whole course of their natural lives, are wholly unprepared to enjoy the pleasures which Angels delight in: which, on the other hand, those who have delighted to cherish hove to the Lord, and charity and good-will towards men, can be in no possible danger of associating with the Devil and his Angels. How very important is the duy, not only of parents and teachers, towards those committed to their care, but of each individual to himself, and particularly those who are just arriving to mature age, "Remember now thy Greator ing to mature age, "Remember now the Create in the days of thy youth."

AMETHYST.

POR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. BROWNLEE'S INQUIRY.

When an author is soliciting aid to publish a new work, it is expected he will satisfy the laudable enquiry, of where lies the necessity, what benefit is likely to result, and what motive has the author in giving to the world the propos-ed publication: upon this and this alone, will a discerning public extend or withhold its patronage.

On noticing the proposal of the Reverend William C. Brownlee, to publish a work entitled, a Caseful and free inquiry into the nature and tendency of the Principles of the religious Society of dency of the Principles of the religious Society of Friends, I cannot but consider him materially deficient in this particular—and his communication in the National Gazette of the 23d inst. (which it seems he intended as an apology for the work) so far from being explanatory of his object, so far from exhibiting any definiteness of his views, that it obliges me to adopt the conclusion, that he is involved in error, and labouring in the dark; or that for reasons with which few are acquainted ed he carefully avoids making public his real mo-

The striking features of the communication and its most obvious meaning, induces me to question the author's seriousness in making the broad assertion, that the books containing an illustration of their doctrines and principles are locked up in the libraries of the curious, and that a vall exists for something on the subject—if however, such is the fact, he does well in confining the call to the Theologians and Professors, and I much fear if, as the Dr. states, they have refused to hear Hawley Penn, Koy, Sayall, they will not to hear Barclay, Penn, Fox, Savell, they will no believe even when the learned author calls from Scottish Story, all the materials of which his mighty structure is to be composed.

mighty structure is to be composed.

I was not brought up a member of the Society of Friends; the means I have had of becoming acquainted with the nature and tendency of their principles, have not been more ample than is generally enjoyed, yet a perusal of some of the many Books written by themselves and others within one hundred and sixty years, has fully explained and demonstrated the nature of their doctrines. As to their tendency, the uniform practice of the society, in relation to its conformity to the precepts of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and the examples of its divine author, is a comand the examples of its divine author, is a com-mentary of the most satisfactory kind. The So-ciety originated upwards of 150 years ago—the first fifty years its members were almost continually engaged in religious controversy; many books were written respecting the nature and tendency of their principles, nearly all of which are extant, and can be procured with facility. Its members have rapidly increased to this time, as their numerous meeting houses prove, in nearly all of which their ministers are weekly expounding their doctrines, and several recent y and of which their ministers are weekly ex-pounding their doctrines, and several recent works are in almost every book store, exclusively relating to the subject. Yet in the face of all this the Doctor wishes us to believe that their religious opinions are altogether unknown; that the books they have written explanatory of their doctrines are not to be procured; and that he and he alone, is in possession of materials from which the society and its true doctrines are to be exhibited.

Thus after a lapse of nearly two hundred years, during which time men of profound learning and acknowledged piety have exerted their talents and worth, relative to the doctrines of the society,

SABBATH MEDITATIONS.

Man enters the world, without any of the actions and sciences, which afterwards characters the motions and sciences, which afterwards characters the motion without any of the actions and sciences, which afterwards characters them, as the noblest work of God. He has been suffered to the Christian world, what it has so long sought in vain—Gratis anhelans, Multa agendo nil agens. The author's sallies, however he wishes to imitate the beauties he thinks he sees in his predecessor the Scottish Laird, are not only illumed, however, inving principles of the modification of many forms, into which, however, living principles of the modification of the present day, according to the nature of the principles of the society, it remains to be the happy lot of a reverend the constant world, what it has so long sought in vain—Gratis anhelans, Multa agendo nil agens. The author's sallies, however he wishes to imitate the beauties he thinks he sees in his predecessor the Scottish Laird, are not only illumed, but injurious to himself; and his extreme readines to break the spear with any antagonist, is demonstrated by his long communication aligned to the nature of the principles of the society, it remains to be the happy lot of a reverend the Christian world, what it has so long sought in vain—Gratis anhelans, Multa agendo nil agens. The author's sallies, however he wishes to initiate the beauties he thinks he sees in his predecessor the Scottish Laird, are not only illumed, but injurious to himself; and his extreme readines to break the spear with any antagonist, is demonstrated by his long communication aligned to be a subject to the does of the thinks he sees in his predecessor the Scottish Laird, are not only illumed, but injurious to himself; and his extreme readines to break the spear with any antagonist, is demonstrated by his long communication aligned to be a subject to the does not be a subject to the does not be a subject to the does not be constraint.

which especially belongs to a Gospel minister, we are presented with a communication fraught with weakness of language, destitute of solid sense, and betraying a levity of heart and an invidious design, which will recoil on his own head; a degree of credit is however due for his having rejected the kind offices of Dr. Ely, in recommending the work in the manner attempted.

As an illustration of the whole, take the following extract from the recommendation:

"While I think that many individuals, called Quakers, are under the gracious influences of the

"While I think that many individuals, called Quakers, are under the gracious influences of the Holy Spirit operating within them, are pardoned for Christ's sale, and so are members of the invisible, spiritual kingdom of Christ, yet I am fully persuaded, that the decirinal system of their Society, so far as their approved writers and preachers have expressed it, is a compound of Platonic theory, mysticism, false philosophy, and infidelity. I wish them as a denomination, saving illumination from the Spirit of God, to understand the Holy Bible, the only infallible rule of faith and practice: and an introduction, through sensible ordinances of Christ's appointment, to the visible church in the world; but we cannot expect them to be convinced of their errors until they will read some refutation of their scheme, and some other authors than their Quaker aposities."

I will not permit myself to doubt, but that Mr. Ely can view with profound complacency this emanation from his hely zeal, for the good of the Quakers; that it has served himfor a dish of answers meal of which he has pleutifully partock, I will not deny; and his ingenuity is admirable in the peculiarity of the seasoning, for I can freely venture the assertion that it will disgust every person, possessing the least delicacy of taste, sensibility of mind, purity of sentiment, and respect for a highly respectable religious society; so that he will remain in the free enjoyment of his luscious morsel alone. It must be a source of sincere regret on the part of the sensible and well informed portion of the community, that a man professing to be a minister of the Gospel, should so far lose sight of the respect due to himself as such, the dignity and honour of his calling, and the importance of the subject upon which he should so far lose sight of the respect due to himself as such, the dignity and honour of his calling, and the importance of the subject upon which he writes, as to indulge in language so repugnant to the finer feelings of the mind, and exhibiting an intolerance of disposition, which is altogether opposed to the mild and forbearing spirit of the Gospel, which will always appear conspicuous in the conduct and characters of those who feel its industry. its influence.—Is the Doctor serious in saying believes many of them under the gracious duence of the Holy Spirit, and are members of the spiritual kingdom of Christ? and yet per-suaded that their religious system is made up of Platonic theory, mysticism, false philosophy, and infidelity? If so, why manifest so much anxiety to have them convinced of the errors of (to bor row an invidious phrase) their scheme; at on accusing them of evil design, and of wilfully a knowingly remaining in error. Upon the whole he will not succeed this time; it requires no un-common share of penetration, to discover through the veil, that it is not for the good of the souls of the Quakers or the advancement of Christianity. the Quakers or the advancement of Christianity, that the Doctor is showing such zeal for the promulgation of his own opinions as the standard of orthodoxy. I advert, with feelings of respect and deference, to the recommendation of the Rev. Samuel Miller, excited by the liberality, good judgment, and dignified manner of that good man; his recommendation does honor to him as a man and a christian: with proper caution he has only adverted to the style and manner of the author, the talout and learning elicited in the work—He says his pressing avocations and the weak state of his eyes prevented him from the weak state of his eyes prevented him from examining it in any other than a cursory manner; if such had not been the case and he had seen the recommendation of Mr. Ely, I cannot think the recommendation or sur. say, he would have permitted his name to appear, a sanctioning Mr. Brownlee's work.

CLARKSON. ne to appear, a

Summer is the season when the country presents us with its most exuberant and delightful charms, and invites the pale visaged inhabitants of the city to seek a shelter within its shades from the sickly fervour of a summer's soluticial sun. where they may breathe the pure air of the groven and souff the breeze scented from the fields more fragrant than Arabian Spices. How invigorating and healthful to emerge from the dust and smoke of the town, to unshackle the mind from the bur-den and cares of business, and to enjoy for a short time the refreshing influence of rural retirement; how tranquilizing to view the works of nature, the wilderness that blossoms as a rose. and the laughing fields that yield their tributary fruit to reward the patient toil of the men.

Perchance to visit the spot of one's nativity, the cenes of our youthful days: that halcyon era to which memory ever delights to recur, when the beart was softened by the glow of generous warmth, and the ardour of sensibility was not damped by a commerce with a contaminating world. How many objects here present to awak. en the remembrance of infantile and youthful joys long departed, and how the revived recollection soothes the mind with melancholy tenderness, and we listen with rapture to the strains which delighted the infant ear, which transported us then with their sprightliness, or soothed us with their sadness. The spreading tree beneath which we were wont to stretch our youthful but listless limbs; the limped stream meandering through the mead, to whose murmurs we used to listen and along whose banks our earliest rambles we direct.

44 Ere yet wasting pains and manhood, brooding cares Had broke the slumbers of our gay repose."

-the little but thick shaded wood and then the adjacent mill-dam, where many a time we cool'd our fervid limbs by bathing in the limpid flood or drew from its broad bosom the finny tenants that swam beneath-not far distant from these more domestic scenes, we extend our walks to where stands the "noisy manaion" in which

" The village master taught his little school." Here busy memory faithful to her trust, musters up a host of little incidents to remind us of joys leparted, alas ! to return no more-

"Here as with pensive steps and slow I range. Trace every scene and wonder at the change, Bemembrance wakes with all her busy train, Swells at my breast and turns the past to pain." Adjoining this aput hard-by stands the reserable and spacious building dedicated to the worship of God supreme. Its solemn and Gothic aspect seldom fails to fill the contemplative observer with awe and reverence. The crave yard too, that reservoir of the exuviz of the dead, where sleep the mouldering relics of our forefathers, what a deep moral lesson may be learnt by stopping here, and lingering a moment to converse Death and dissolution-to wander over the sacred ground " where heaves the turf in many a moulding heap," and where obtivion dwells amid unlabelled graces, and the grass waves in rich luxuriance as if to hide the triumphs and the trophies of Death .- Oft have I regretted that here no love, nor respect, nor friendship is permitted to carve a tablet to mark the spot of the slumber er beneath "-" Their name, their years spelt by the unletter'd muse," would serve to awaken dumbforgetfulness" in many a cursory observer, and inculcate a deep lesson of morality, from which the proud might learn humility-the frivolous learn seriousness, and the bigot charity and philanthrophy. Here greatness and pre-eminence mingle with the low and the humble, for all must lie down upon the same common, mournful, silent dead level of the grave,-Here all the illusive schemes and projects of life terminate-gain and grandeur are useless treasures.-The hurry and bustle of trade here ceases-in this silent and solitary recess, as in the building of Jerusalem's sa cred temple is heard no sound of the age and the hammer. All earthly and human devices are here terminated in one common fearful issue.-Here as we wander o'er the prostrate dead, hold communion with Death and ourselves, and take siview as it were of the vast landscape of immortality, how despicable, how abject appear the things belonging to time and sense,-Rambling through rows of kindred and acquaintance, it affords a soothing melancholy satisfaction to linger a moment over the graves of those with whom love or sympathy hath bound us in ties too strong for Death to rend asunder-you gently rising hillock marks the spot where sleeps in peace the mouldering relicof Eliza, and by her side repose the ashes of her cousin Mary, both blooming plants brush'd away by the rude hand of the relentless spoiler, in the orn of life's short day. May the dews of Heaven weep tenderly over them-may they decorate this turf with their brightest pearls, and may the gen tle zephyrs breath softly upon them, sighing ou their sorrows for their untimely fall-

" From the tomb the voice of Nature cries, Even in their ashes live their wonted fires."

And even now, methinks, I hear their little sainte spirits, breath a strain divine that hath power to charm, bidding us be chaste and innocent like them, in duties' sphere faithfully move, and telling us that though

"Its an awful thing to die, Yet the dread path once trud, Heaven lifts its portals high And bids the pure in heart behold their God.

THE BACHELOR'S ELYSIUM.

We are informed that there is in the other world, a place prepared for maids and bachelors, called FIDDLER'S GREEN, where they are condemned for the lack of good fellowship in this world, to dance together to all eternity. One of a party who had been conversing on this subject, after retiring been conversing on this subject, after retiring home, had his brain so occupied with it, that it his dream be imagined himself dead, and translat ed to this scene of incessuat fidding and dancing. After describing his journey to these merry abodes of hopping shades, he says that on passing the confines, he perceived a "female figure ad-vancing with a rambling, rapid motion, resem-bling a hop, skip and jomp." He now cast " a bling a hop, skip and jump." He now cast " a glasce over his own person, as a genteel spirit would naturally do at the approach of a female, and discovered for the first time, that although he had left his substance in the other world, he was possessed of an airy form precisely similar to the one he had left behind him, and was clad in the ghost of a suit of cluther, made after the newest fashion, which he had purchased a few days before his sleath." As the figure came near, she slackened her pace, and struck into a graceful chassee forward, at the same time motioning to cross a rivulet, which he are sooner did, than he fell a dauging with incredible agility."

He is then conducted, or rather whirled away

He is then conducted, or rather whirled away He is then conducted, or rather whirled away in a waltz by his fair companion, to the manager of the Green, where he has an opportunity of beholding the congregated celibacy of the place. The grotesque appearance of the various groupes particularly amused him. "The Greenar robe and the Roman toga, the Monkish cowl, the Monastic veil, and the blanket and feathers of the Indian, were minigled in Judiceous content." Indian, were mingled in ludicrous contrast."

The allotment of partners was equally diverting.

"A geotleman in an embroidered suit led off a beggar girl, while a broad shouldered Mynheer flaunted with an Italian counters."—" Queen Eli flaunted with an Italian counters."—" Queen Elizabeth was dancing a jig with a jotly cobler, a person of great bonhommie, but who failed not to apply the strap when his stately partier moved with less agility than comported with his notions." It is attention was then arrested by the appearance of a spare looking gentlemen, advancing to the Genius of the place in high giee. Poor man! he had no sooner same up to a groupe of ladies, than a tall, swarthy, lastern jawed, antiquated virgin, raised her foot, as a challenge for him to dance, whereupon they both feli to, and had danced six months when he left them, without any prospect of cessation. of cessation.

TAMERIAME — When Bajuzet, after his defeat, was carried into the presence of Timur Lench, that is, Timur the Lame, vulgarly Timuriane, un perceiving that Bajuzet had but one eye, Timur burst into a loud laughter. The Turk, who could ill brook any incivility, said fercely, "You may deride my misfortunes, Timur, but remember they might have happened to yourself. The disposal of kingdoms is in the hands of God, and their states depend on his will." Timur replied with equal haughtines, "I agree with your observations — I did not laugh at your misfortune, but at a reflection that just occurred to my mind; how little value thrones and sceptres possess in the judgoment of God: who has taken a kingdom from a man with one eye, to give it to another with our large."

The first part of this evening was spent in paying a visit to a friend, where the moments were passed away in that calm interchange of cought of congenial feeling, which add to the light this simulate times a reflection of pure and measured thought, through the long vista of oblivion which shoulds in forgetfulness the misor some and occasionables of life. Believed ?—Oh! could she bear to think.

Believed ?—Oh! could she bear to think.

That ought might break that golden link,
Which bound their loves in blies as arrong.

That nought but death might do it wrong.

Oh! no, she ill could bear such pam,
But thought that all would thus remain,
And that she still might has that cheek,
And all a sister's fordness speak.

But yet she hath lived to behold thes.

And all a sister's fundness speak.

But yet she hath lived to behold that sister as as alien and a stranger: the wife of one of the first merchants in this city, enjoying the members and elegancies of life, and forgetting, or rather senders and elegancies of life, and forgetting, or rather senders pounding (for forget she cannot,) the partner of her youthing pleasures, the sharer of her childhood sports, when they "knew not the doctrine of lift doing, no, nor deem'd that any did;" neglecting that form that once yielded to her kind and sisterly embraces, but which is now wasted and emociated by toil and suffering—well may she exclaim—

1 Is all the courset that we two have shared,

The aster's yows, the hours that we have shared,

by (oil and suffering—well may she exclaim—

'Is all the counset that we two have shared,

'The sister's vows, the hours that we have speed,

'When we have chid the hasty footed time

'For parting us—Oh! and is all forgotten?'

There is still a remaining softness in her pensive blue eyes, but all their life and vivacity have gone; and their languid, abstracted, and lost appearance, speak strongly the betterness that is feeding and wasting within, and seem to say, "what siekness of heart if is which ariseth from hope deferred." I often look at her with a heavy heart, and grieve when she has told me, as the sometimes, but not often bath done, how different bersituation in life had been; and she once said, but in a mild forgiving tone of voice, that her sister was very different now from what she was when they were both young together. She little ught, she said, they should ever meet but in assa: but, she added, it is long since we have a spoken to each other. And when I meet her, as I sometimes have, in the atreet roiling along m her carriage, I am fain to hide myself iske a beggar, and turn out of the way to shun those looks that were noce so dear to me.

along in her carriage, I am Iain to hide myself like a beggar, and turn out of the way to shun those how's that were once so dear to me.

This is not fiction. I can take you now to her wretched dwelling, and show you amid the habiliments of penury and grief, the poor remains of former beauty and happiness. But I have not told you, as I ought, the original and perhaps main cause of this alteration; would you believe it is owing to her husband? but alas, he deserves not the endearing appellation. Yet he was once a respectable citizen, and a good and affectionate husband, till intemperance, a poisonous fierd, stole in upon him like a loathsome pestilence and corrupted his soul. Yes, the fell destroyer came, and their sun of mutual gladness was utterly an corrupted his soul. Yes, the tell destroyer came, and their sun of mutual gladness was utterly on tinguished in darkness and we.

The husband is charged to the sot, the man to a brute; for liquor, like a faul disease, bath so wrought upon his mind, that the mental faculties, and all sense of reflection and les ling seem lost. It is almost enough to make one "blush and hang his head to think himself a man," to behold this impotent, bloated; remnant of a man, hanging around and drinking up her hard-carned pittance, without contributing aught toward the support of her or her half-clothed children. The mere idea or supposition that liquor may have such an effect, and be productive of such consequences, ought of itself to be sufficient to place an eternal prohibition upon its use or existence. Yet this woman with a constancy surprising under such circumstances, continues to retain a degree of regard, nay affection, toward the being to whom in better days she had pledged her vows, whose misconduct hath alienated from her the frie as of her youth, and been in truth the destroyer of her neace upon earth. her youth, and been in truth the destroyer of her ner youth, and been in truth the destroyer of her peace upon earth.

On leaving this unhappy scene, I turned with some relief to the bright full-orbed moon which was just arising in the blue, we expanse of Heaven; illuminating in her course the deep profound with glowing radiance as she sailed gently upward among the white fleecy clouds that were thinly and lightly floating along her path.

The blessed thought, that when this land, This mortal covering of pain and sin is dropp'd—the soul flies her abode, Her weary tenement of earthly clay, Hids sorrow, grief, and sin, and tears farewell, oaring to regions of immortal day, Mid realms of bliss for ever more to dwell.

Mid realms of bliss for ever more to dwell.

What holy rapture then must fill the breast,
What transport rush thro' every youthful vein,
When care, affliction, all shall sink in rest
And weeping virtue never weep again.
Then to look back on all life's fleeting scenes.
The little lits that ver' us to the last;

Flooked upon them with deep attention; sere both young and humble, yet interpret and I could not but wish in the sincerity heart, that God might bless and prosper. When about retiring I had intended to om a compliment in my best style, and at ne time express, at least a portion, of the r I felt on their behalf. FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

I have at last had an opportunity, long desired, (for I did not know where or how to procure it.) to read "Observations or the slavery of the Africans and their descendants, and of the use of the produce of their labour, by ELLAS HICKS." Philadelphis, printed by Joseph Rakestraw, No $ 36, North Third-street -I say long desired, for I have heard it represented as most absurd, ridiculous, and indeed every thing but dispussionate, judicious and worthy of attention or perusal 1 and I am pleased to find, what indeed I expected was the case, that his doctrines on the slavery of the Africans, &c. are as much misinterpreted and at little understood by those who denounce them, as the only compe tent judges of orthodoxy, as are the doc trines of the christian religion, as preached by the venerable author-In short, I consider the performance excellent; the reasoning sound, conclusive, and manswer able; every way worthy of Elias Hicks and a noble testimony to the truth; which though not new, or first hold by him, will in time prevail; and will associate his name in after ages among the friends of humanity, and the advocates of even and equal justice, when his opponents and those that calumniate and asperse his character, will not be known to have ever MRK. As the present age is deemed to surpass all former ages is philosophical knowledge, so the inhabitants of the United Surves are often atyled, in the public prints, the most enlightened nation the earth. Although the latter assertion, granied, with regard to their postical right of matters relating to them, still in many other respects expecience farbids us to give if our general assent.—What must we think, when we see, that many thousands suffer themselves to be led away and he wishered by visiously and extravagant notions, editorary to the dictates of south reason and revealed truth. The Brighton (English) paper mentions that there is at present residing in Brighton, a lady of great beauty and accomplishments, possessed of a quality which puts out of all distance the fame of the celebrated Mr. Doublelunge. This extraordinary and singular faculty arises from a peculia formation of the tongue, which is separated to the foot, in a longitudinal direction, and actually forms a double tongue. Not the slightest inconvenience is felt from this exuberant gift of nature. With this desirable and admirable addition to the organ of domentic comfort, this lady is enabled to afford entertainment to her friends beyond the power of any ventriloquist, or indeed conception. From the personal charms she possesses, as well as a highly endowed mind, she has had many suitors, none of whom have retired from paying homage, owing to the effects of the extra clapher hung in this enchanted belle. She possesses two voices: one exceedingly clear, sweet, and harmonious, allowing her to sing with great effect : the other so exquisitely thrilling, that it must have been bestowed on her for no other purpose than to hisp the still small voice of love. With this voice she imitates exactly the notes of many birds, piping like a bullfinch, singing like a Canary: what is remarkable, her mother was deaf and dumb.

It was stated some time since in the papers, that a son of Gen. Hamilton and Col. Burr, lived together in Missouri, and wrote in the same offices in strict personal friendship. The report is now said to be un-founded, as Colonel Burr never had any male issue. Col. Burr had, we believe, but one child, a daughter who was mairied to Gov. Alston. In returning from Charles-ton, the vessel was lost, and every soul on board perished. Whether the vessel was foundered at sea or captured by pirates, has never yet been ascertained.

FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN.

By an arrival at Baltimore from Smyrna, it is stated that a vessel immediately from Negropont, had brought intelligence to Smyrna, that on or about the 1st of June, the Turks had landed an army of 5000 men at Esparmatore, (Negropont) the whole of whom had been cut to pieces or taken prisoners by the Greeks.

The Algerine, Tunislan, Egyptian and Turkish fleet consist of about a hundred and fifty to a hundred and sixty sail of vessels. The Turks have no ships of the line in their fleet this summer, they being fearful of the Greek fire-ship, of which the Greeks have about 15 .- On the 17th June captain Dickinson saw the Greck fleet of 135 sail, between the Islands of Mitilene and Ipsara, seering for the Gulf of Smyr-There was not one ship among them -about 40 or 50 sail of brigs and schooners, and the rest smaller. At Milo, captain D. was informed that the Turkish fleet had been seen off the Island about the 8th of June, standing towards Candia. It was said the instructions of the Captain Pacha mbraced the power of exterminating the Greeks if possible, or of making peace with them. It was also reported that if something decisive was not effected this sumhe would not return to Constantinople, but would make his winter quarters at

PEOPLE OF COLOUR.

GOOD NEWS FROM MESSURADO.

Bultimore, September 2.—We are happy to have it in our power to convince our Boston friends, that the Munchausen story of the sickness and mortality at Messurado, and the death of all the colonists who went over in the last packet, to settle in that country, and of the destruction of the fort by an African Tornado, are nothing more than poetic dreams, formed to embellish some tale of African romance. We have just conversed with Captain George C. Thompson, of the fast sailing Liberia Packet the Fidelity, who left Cape Messurado on the 23d of July, a month later than the Oswego at Boston. His report is, "That the Colonists are all well, abundantly supplied with provisions, contented, comfortable and happy. Two only of those who arrived in the last packet had died, and those more by their own imprudence, than from the inveteracy of the disease. The fort said to have been destroyed by a tornado, was still left standing, and captain Thompson walked upon its platform. Lots were to be laid out for the settlers, which they were to cultivate, awaiting only the subsidence of the rains. This arrival brings the intelligence down to forty days.

This packet might with propriety be called the Messardo Flying Fish, for captain Thompson arrived at that place from this port, in a passage of thirty-one days, and returned, via Turks Island, in thirty-one days, and returned, via Turks Island,

MORTALITY AT SIERRA LEONE.

Extract of a letter, dated Sierra Leone, May 31.

"That dreadful scourge the yellow Jever has been brought into this colony by the ship Caroline, from the Mediterranean, and out of a population of about 110 Europeans, nearly cighty have fallen victims to this dreadful disease: upwards of 250 blacks have also died of it. Our streets are literally deserted.

PHILADELPHIA.

Saturday, September 6, 1823.

Since our last, we believe no material change has taken place in the health of our suburbs.-Within the immediate bounds of the city, it cos tinues to remain as healthy as usual at this time of the year; but some idea may be formed of the extreme distress existing in our vicinity from the simple statement, that a respectable physician lately visited a dwelling in Penn Township, where, says a correspondent of the National Ga-"the father lay dead up stairs, while the mother and four children were below, so reduced by disease, that neither had strength to hand a cup of water to the other, and no living being in the house to lend them assistance" -- and other instances are known where whole families are placed in the same deplorable condition.

These cases occur mostly among those who are dependent on their daily labour for support, and who must consequently be, in a great measure, without the necessities of life.

We understand measures have been taken for their relief, and we know this appeal to the well known benevolence and liberality of Philadelphians will not be made in vain.

We have been much pleased with reading the lively and interesting sketch which our friend Mixxu has given us in his last paper, of the flou rishing prospects of the happy little village of WESTCHESTER. We have ourselves lately visited this place, and can attest to the fidelity and correctness of the picture : that is as far as it goesand cheerfully supply the deficiency which the modesty of our friend has left unfinished-in bearing testimony to the polite and hospitable disposition of its respectable inhabitants. ate in the heart of one of the richest, most populous, and highly cultivated counties in the state, within 224 miles of Philadelphia, and 16 of Wilmington," with all the natural advantages of nure water and a salubrious air, and the many acquired, which an industrious and enterprising population have given it, we certainly know of no cause why Westchester should not, but, on the contrary, every cause why it should, continue to grow, until it had doubled, trebled, or increased to even four times its present numbers And among the good things that are calculated to enliven the interest which is attached to this agreeable country town, the good sense, humour and sterling talent displayed in the columns of the VILLAGE RECORD, are certainly, in our estimation, not the least.

It is stated that Doctor P-, of the village of Frankford, a few days since, by virtue of the Fever and Ague Powder, brought a child to life which had to all appearance been dead three hours.

We understand, by the late arrivals, that Swaim's Panacea is performing surprising cures in England, and that it has superseded the use of the Genuine French Rob of Lafuetuer, in many instances, in diseases for which that remedy is intended. Thus we see that this new American Medicine is highly approved of in England, notwithstanding the envious prejudices of some of the Faculty.

His Excellency, F. Greuhm, Minister resident from Prussia, and family, arrived in this city, on Sunday last, in the brig Hibernia, from Hamburg.

Mr. Hines, one of the high constables of this city, on Monday last at New-York. apprehended Catharine McGuire, who was connected with the noted Mrs. Carson, in passing counterfeit money. Mr. H. conveyed her to the police office, where she was examined by the magistrates, and committed to Bridewell.

On Saturday afternoon, a small boy, who was playing on Willing's wharf, was thrown into the river, and whilst in the most imminent danger of drowning, was rescued by Capt. Joseph Kay, who plunged into the water, and brought him safe to land.

The Rev. J. P. Peckworth, of Philadelphia, preaches at the Old Baptist meeting house, Old Town, Baltimore, to-morrow, of which church he has undertaken the pastoral charge.

The Rev. Dr. Staughton has resigned his situation as Pastor of the Baptist Church in Sansom Street, having accepted the upanimous invitation of the Trustees of the Columbia College in Wash ington (D. C.) to take upon him the duties of the Presidency of that Institution. He will leave this city on Monday next. The piety, talents and learning of Dr. Staughton, cannot fail of contri buting largely to the prosperity of this infant Institution.

A most daring robbery was perpetrated on the 29th ult. on the Matietta and Susqueliannah Trading Company, by three villains, who seized the Cashier on the back porch of the Banking House, and presenting three pistols to his breast to enforce silence, dragged himin to the Bank and compelled him to unlock the vault, from which they took out and carried away all the books and promissory notes and other valuable papers belonging missory notes and other valuable papers belonging to the Bank, and a large quantity of Bank Paper; one of the villains held the Cashier with a pistol to his breast, until his two comrades had sufficient time to escape with their plunder, and then made his escape. The villains were well disguised and masked, and spoke only in the German lan-Subry-TAKENS - Look at this !us calculation, of the time wasted by lessed snuff-takers—Every professed, sterate, and incurable snuff-taker, says Lordship, at a moderate scalculation. takes one pinch every ten minutes-every pinch, with the agreeable ceremony of blowing and wiping the nose and other ineidental circumstances, consumes a mi-nute and a half-this, admitting sixteen hours to a snuff-taking day, amounts to two hours and twenty-four minutes out of every natural day, or one day out of every in every year. Hence if we suppose it to be persisted in for forty years, two entire years of a souff-taker's life will be dedicated to tickling his nose and two more to blowing it. The expence of snuff-boxes and handkerchiefs is not insisted uponthey would make a separate es ay by thempour that this luxury encronches as much on the income of the snuff taker, as it does on his time, and that by a proper application of the time and money thus spent, a fund might be created for paying off the national debt.

The Empanon Atourres.—The Emperor Augustus gave an admirable example how a person who sends a challenge ought to be treated. When Mark Autony, after the battle of Actium, send him a challenge, his answer to the messenger who brought it, was, "Tell Mark Autony, if he between of life, there are other ways to dispatch it: I shall not therefore take the trouble to be his executioner."
